

Pggraph - Bug #4947

Do testing of data arrays

07/16/2008 09:01 PM - Aurynn Shaw

Status:	New	Start date:
Priority:	High	Due date:
Assignee:	Aurynn Shaw	% Done:	0%
Category:		Estimated time:	0.00 hour
Target version:
Resolution:

Description

While generating date range pages, we should test the length of each return set, so that we can trim out offsets that are going to be no-shows.

This is going to be kind of expensive to do for every page refresh, but I feel it's worthwhile.

Alternatively, just have "NO DATA" splayed over the image in the event that there's no data.

How should we approach this?

History

#1 - 07/16/2008 09:24 PM - bford -

```
On Thu, 2008-07-17 at 04:01 +0000, pggraph wrote:
> #4947: Do testing of data arrays
> -----+-----
> Reporter:  aurynn  |      Owner:  aurynn
>      Type:  defect  |      Status:  new
> Priority:  major   |      Version:
> Keywords:          |
> -----+-----
> While generating date range pages, we should test the length of each > return set, so that we can trim out offsets that are going to be no-shows.
>
> This is going to be kind of expensive to do for every page refresh, but I > feel it's > worthwhile.
>
> Alternatively, just have "NO DATA" splayed over the image in the event > that there's no data.
>
> How should we approach this?

NO DATA == FAST
```

:)